

Amaten

Description

Amaten, an idyllic village overlooking the city of Brunico (Bruneck), is located at an elevation of about 1,260 metres. Eduard Wolfgruber planted a tree here on his wedding day in 1947 as a token of love for his wife Maria: it still stands here, solitary, in a meadow. The site has lost none of its romantic character, even today, and couples of all ages enjoy the wonderful views of the Brunico Valley Basin from here. A brass plaque was mounted on the tree trunk in 1997 in celebration of the couple's fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Categories: Mountains, forests, plateau, Dolomites, Alpine farms and huts

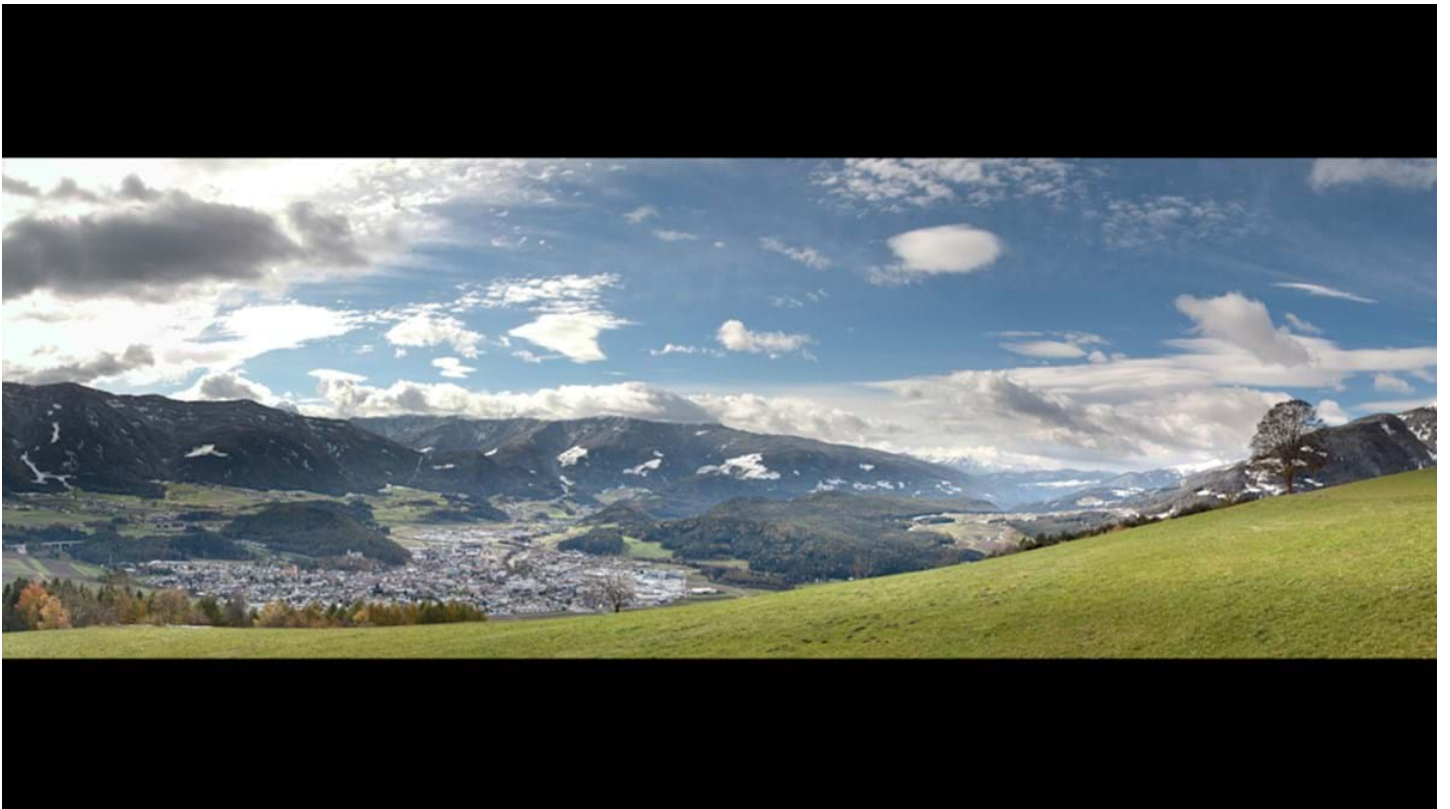

Topic: romantic, isolated

Water:	×
Electricity:	×
Elevator:	×
Parking:	✓
Access for	passenger cars

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter

© Photographer: Florain Wenter, Anna Wenter