Lake Caldaro Lido

Description

Lake Caldaro Lido, in the village of Caldaro, was inaugurated in 2006. The landscape, dotted with vineyards, slopes gently down towards the lakeshore, and the architects who built the facility exploited the sloping landscape to take visitors on a journey through light, airy steel pavilions with broad butterfly-wing roofs constructed over floors composed of wooden boards, reminiscent of the deck of a cruise ship. Initially, the model and design for the project suggested a damagingly high-impact intervention in a sensitive, delicate landscape, but such fears proved unfounded, and once complete, the structure turned out to be just the kind of attractive, sophisticated new quality leisure facility Caldaro had hoped for. The extremely modern architecture slots smoothly into the surrounding landscape of traditional constructions featuring two-pitch roofs with a truncated slope.
